

Working in early years?

A free 12-hour online course can help you in identifying and responding to additional support needs

Start dates: 21 June, 16 August, 11 October 2021

Sign up at:

Identifying and responding to additional support needs in early learning and childcare \(ELC\)

Search for 'Openlearn Create identifying and responding to additional support needs'

This module has been commissioned by the Scottish Government. It takes around 12 hours to complete, running over six weeks. It includes a 1-hour webinar with a speech and language therapist.

Whatever your level of experience and knowledge and whatever early learning and childcare setting you work in, you will find content in the module that will help you to reflect and develop your understanding of what you can do to get it right for every child in Scotland.

Study at your own pace and gain a digital badge to record in your Scottish Social Services Council (SSSC) Post Registration Training and Learning.

Hear from practitioners and parents from early years settings as well as from play work and community projects. Contributors include Elizabeth Henderson, author of Autoethnography in Early Childhood Education and Care: Narrating the Heart of Practice, and play radical playworker Max Alexander:

“Elizabeth Henderson is an inspiration”
– Julie Marshall, practitioner

“Really useful and interesting and I feel more confident in my role ... to support children and the families in my setting”
– Trudy Mercer, practitioner

<https://bit.ly/3gfyCGq> -

Search for 'Openlearn Create identifying and responding to additional support needs'